Creating Effective Learning Environments for Students with Significant Social-Emotional and Behavioral Needs

Register at www.clsteam.net

Students with significant social-emotional and behavioral needs are one of the most challenging groups within the school setting. Designing effective classroom learning environments that support the diverse needs of this population is equally challenging.

The CLS C5 Summer Institute is a 2-day workshop designed to help teams effectively support students with social-emotional and behavioral needs, especially those in self-contained classroom settings. Using experiential activities and collaborative action-planning, workshop participants will explore topics including:

- ✓ Effective instructional strategies for meeting the emotional and academic needs of this complex population of students
- ✓ Supporting the whole child: the role of the MFT, Social Worker, Psychologist and other staff
- ✓ Parent and Student Voice
- ✓ Using student data to track program effectiveness
- ✓ Adult wellness to prevent burnout
