As Tough As We Need to Be: Classroom Interventions to Build Accountability and Community

In this engaging workshop, presented by Akoben, LLC., participants will have an opportunity to explore their own current practice, evaluate what is working and what is not, and develop an explicit framework for building and strengthening a sense of connection and community in the classroom; the critical factor that ties together best-practice in all classroom management strategies. Through hands-on exercises specifically designed to foster self-reflection and exploration in practical, real-life situations, participants will take away tangible tools to help them exercise their authority in a manner that proactively builds community, effectively responds to disruptive behavior and creates a classroom culture that feels safe and is conducive to learning. The connection between teaching-style and impact on brain states with a particular focus on improving learning outcomes will also be presented.
